Consultations with People about the Intelligence Process

1. We want to talk obviously with consumer reps. But we might also want to consult with people who have been involved in production previously. Among these I would suggest especially:

Fritz Ermath
Abbot Smith	(Director of ONE)
John Huizenga	(Director of ONE)
Hal Ford	(now with Senate Committee on Intelligence)

2. You are much more familiar than I am with suitable consumer reps. I will only add one who has an incisive mind: Paul Wolfowitz (formerly with ACDA, now Assistant Secretary of Defense, was member of Team B). Among previous consumers, George Kennan and Henry Kissinger would be worth thinking about. Dean Rusk perhaps?

3. There are also people at "think tanks" who are familiar with intelligence estimates (mostly military). Here my preference would be Donald Brennan at the Hudson Institute.

4. Among academics who have some familiarity with intelligence, Alexander George at Stanford would be my ^{first} ~~main~~ choice. Richard Betts at Brookings might also be worth considering. Also perhaps Chalmers Johnson (Berkeley).

5. If we want to try out ideas on old hands still in the Agency, I know would be interesting.
